We don't always know how God causes the seed to grow in the hearts of men. We don't always know how long it will take to produce fruit. We certainly don't know which hearts will be open to receive the Word of God before we teach it. That is why we must scatter as much seed as possible over as much ground as we can. The more we sow the more God can produce fruit. Sometimes we can study with someone and they respond much later by obeying the gospel. Let God keep working on their heart while we go out and continue to scatter the seed. Everyone who has an open heart can obey if given the opportunity. Isn't it great to be a coworker with God Himself in the greatest work on earth!
